

Exam in i PC-labs: Documentation for students

Oktober 2012

Background

Exams using PC-labs is based on a new system developed during 2012 for computer based exams, called "Tentamenssystemet". Using this system it is possible to have anonymous exams in computer rooms. This document has been written by Måns Magnusson¹ and Oleg Sysoev².

Before the exam

At least two (2) work days before exam

If students are allowed to use their own material:

- Send the extra material to the teacher as a zip-archive in the way the teacher specifies. The Zip-archive must be protected by a password.
NOTE! A Word documenting of maximum 100 pages (minimum font size 10) including pictures is allowed. NOTE! Inform the teacher about the password of the zip archive.

During the exam

Just before the exam

- You should get an exam account and password from the exam guards.
- Log in into the exam system .
NOTE! Do not use your own LiU account, only the account handed to you by the exam guards
- Copy the exam and extra material from the folder "Templates" to a new folder on drive Z:\.

¹mans.magnusson@liu.se

²oleg.sysoev@liu.se

If students are allowed to use their own material:

- Copy you zip archive from the folder “Templates” to a new folder on drive Z:\.

When you are done with the exam

- Save solution to the exam at the following place:
Z:\Solutions\
NOTE! Solutions or file names are not allowed to include your name in any way.
- Delete the files you’ve copied from the the folder “Templates”.

Exam rules

- During the exam it’s not allowed to:
 - log into your own LiU account
 - write your name in solutions or file names
 - log out from the computer before the exam is done and copied to Z:\Solutions.
 - communicate in any way with other students
 - use an USB memory
 - use internet
 - log into two or more computers